Carrier oils are fatty vegetable, nut, or seed oils easily blendable with the lipophilic essential oils, the most commonly used being fractionated coconut oil. While raw coconut oil is a semisolid at room temperature, it liquefies when heated; the fractionated form is liquid at room temperature allowing for easy dilution of essential oils. Other popular carrier oils are jojoba oil, popular for facial blends since it is the closest to your skin's natural sebum, sweet almond oil for the
