Family Law NB - Online resources for the public :: FAQ's ...

How long do we have to live together before we have rights as a common law couple? The amount of time you must live together before you are entitled to particular rights can vary. For example, in New Brunswick a legal obligation to support a common-law partner arises when they have lived with each other for three years and one person is substantially dependent on the other. This obligation arises after one year of living together where you have a child together. Federal laws, employers
