Electron Spin Resonance Studies on Normal Human Uterus and ...

Electron spin resonance (ESR) studies at -130 have been made on frozen samples of normal human cervix and uterus and on frozen samples of various pathological conditions of the cervix and uterus including fibroleiomyoma and carcinoma. Fifty-five samples of normal cervix and endometrium, 40 samples of nonmalignant disturbances, 15 benign tumor samples, and 20 malignant samples were studied

How noise in force fields can affect the structural ...

It seems that future advances in structural refinement of protein models depend mostly on significant progress in developing better force fields having less uncertainty 21, which can be specifically designed for structure refinement. Another possibility of advancement in this field might be a design of a novel sampling scheme that possesses the ability of generating more likely native-like decoys.

The main reason for this successful description of the data was attributed 21) to the imaginary part of the spin-orbit potential in the "JA" potential, whereas in the "GI" potential no spin-orbit distortion is included. Comparing the SKI2-HF results (fig. 5) with the TOO J. Ryckebusch et al. / (e, e'n) and (e, e'p) "best-fit" optical potential curves (fig. 6b) it is striking that both
