What Is the Difference between a Serger and Sewing Machine?

Sewing machines and sergers are mostly differentiated only by the type of stitch each creates — the serger can create an overlock stitch and conventional machines cannot. A serger is the perfect choice for overlocking, cutting and seaming tasks.

Understanding a Serger or Overlocking Sewing Machine

A serger trims the seam and encloses the seam allowance or edge of the fabric, inside a thread casing, all in one step. The width and density of the stitching are two of the many variables available on a serger.

In dealing specifically with the problem of seam allowances, a serger is a finishing tool. First, the serger's knife cuts a clean edge on the fabric, and then it's multiple threads (depending on the machine, you can use 3, 4, or 5 threads) wrap around the raw edge of the fabric, enclosing it and ensuring it won't fray.

Serger vs Sewing Machine (April 2019) - Sewing Authority

A sewing machine can do the same kind of job that a Serger can, so a Serger isn't needed to sew as a hobby. If you sew a lot, and you need a heavier duty seam, a Serger is a must for you. Sergers are used to create the professional grade seams we see in store bought clothes.
